The Domestic Abuse Council of Volusia County, Inc. announces that Amanda Gosselin is the new Domestic Violence Child Welfare Advocate.

Gosselin worked at the Domestic Abuse Council for six months before being promoted to the new program, which is part of a statewide initiative between the Florida Coalition Against Domestic Violence and the Department of Children and Families.

Originally from Massachusetts, Gosselin graduated from LeTourneau University in Texas with a BS degree in psychology.

Gosselin will be co-located at the Domestic Abuse Council and DCF. In her new position she will serve as a consultant to the child welfare staff and community partners regarding case that involve children in a household where there may be domestic violence.
